GOOD SERMONS BY MINISTERS OF THIS CITY

MANY ATTEND SERVICES AT METHODIST, PRESBYTERIAN AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

"CERTAINTY IN RELIGION"

Is Subject of Rev. Taylor. Strong Talks Given By Rev. Bruner, And Rev. Raphael.

"Certainty in Religion" was the subject of the sermon by Dr. Taylor in the First Methodist Church yesterday morning. Taking as his text these words from Paul's Second Letter to Timothy, first chapter and twelfth verse, "For I know him whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to guard all that I have committed unto him against that day," he said in part:—

"Our attempts to find the value of the unknown quantity are not confined to algebra. In every field of human interest we seek to discover the dependable facts which underlie and account for the particular bit of cosmic behavior with which we are dealing on which to base with confidence our expectations. We are convinced that the universe we see is not the result of erratic happenings but rather of an orderly procedure. We have good reason to believe that if we go about it in the right way, we can discover what are the reliable factors in this orderly procedure. Hence, by what is called in science "Trial and error method," we test out our beliefs and arrive at what we accept to be established facts or certainties. Is there any reason why this same method should not be employed in the field of religion?"

"With Paul, religion was not merely a belief, but a certainty and a vision. He was not only certain of the existence of the God in whom he believed, but he was persuaded of the trustworthiness of his character. His absolute confidence in the object of his faith was evidenced not only in what he said but quite as much in what he ventured to do. He was willing to stake everything upon his confidence in the reality and reliability of God. By what route had Paul arrived at this high degree of religious certainty? Not by reliance upon the authoritative utterances of an infallible Church; the Church was as yet only in its infancy and no such claims for it had been set up. Not by reliance upon the authority of an infallible Book; only a small part of the New Testament had as yet been written. Nor had he attained unto this certainty by processes of logic. His purely rational procedure had led him in a very different direction. It was experience upon the way to Damascus which turned the search-light of Divine inquiry upon his life and discovered to him the utter folly of the course he was pursuing and opened up to him a new way. Venturing to believe this experience and to enter upon this new way, he tried out in the laboratory of daily endeavor the formula for Godliness he had received in this vision, and found that it worked for the liberation and enlargement and enrichment of his life. It was by this process of practical experimentation that he arrived at the assurance out of which he could write in the very face of approaching death, "I know him whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to guard all that I have committed unto him against that day."

"If we are to arrive at certainty in religion it will be by like method of procedure. A certainty which is based upon the authority of an infallible Church will crumble in presence of the fact that the church is not infallible. A certainty which rests upon the authority of an infallible book will be shaken by any discovery that seems to discredit the infallibility of that book. Any certainty which grows out of learned argument is likely to vanish when met by an equally learned argument from the other side. But certainty arrived at by patient endeavor to live out in daily life the formula of Godliness which Jesus gave to his disciples is unshakable. 'He that willeteth to do will, shall know.'"

"There is no easy way to certainty in religion. Wearied at a place of unshakable confidence only by travelling the exacting road of faithful endeavor to do the doctrine. The outcry against reality in religion comes not from those who have ventured to obey the heavenly vision which has come to them in a crisis moment of meditation, but rather from those who, in defense of their own rebellious spirit, have set out to denounce the testimony of their own nobler moments."

Presbyterian Church.

The subject and text of the message at the morning service in The Presbyterian Church were taken from the wayside experience of Jesus at Jacob's well, as recorded in the Gospel according to John, the fourth chapter. The twenty-eighth verse of this passage "So the woman left her water-pot" was the basis of the theme "The Forgotten Water Jar." Rev. V. L. Raphael said, this is one of the richest gems in all the crown of Jesus. It scintillates from every point of view. Its humanness, its simplicity and its color claim and hold our interest. An unnamed Samaritan woman visits the ancestral well to draw water. A perfectly natural mission to supply a physical need. It is presumed from the ensuing conversation that the water was for drinking purposes. Man must ever give attention to the material side of his nature. Food, drink, clothing, shelter, etc., must be provided to care for his body. He needs to drink deeply from the wells of knowledge, of culture, of happiness. Unfortunately the pursuit of the material often leads us beyond the mere satisfactions of life into the realm of indulgence and extravagance. Of this we must beware lest we become destructive rather than constructive in our living.

This woman if a despised race found a strange face beside the spring upon her arrival. He opened a memorable conversation with her by asking for a drink of water. She countered by calling attention to the age-long difference between Jew and Samaritan. Ignoring her reference, Jesus offers to her "the living water." In her quest for that which would merely satisfy her physical thirst, she finds the spiritual. Is it not true that God intends that man shall often discover him by the way of the objects in his own experience? Through the bread that nourishes our bodies we ought to recognize God the giver. In music, it is possible to rise in thought to those loftier strains such as the angels sing around the throne of God. In education one ought to find his thoughts going out to the source of all knowledge. As one handles the currency of his pocket book, it should be apparent that these possessions are ours by the instrumentality of a divine power. Since the spiritual objectives are expected to be the ultimate goal of man, he ought to try to reach them through all with which he comes in contact.

John was a very observing person which added greatly to his ability as a writer. He notes an interesting fact which perhaps another would have passed by as a non-essential. He tells us that the woman was so impressed and inspired by the message of Jesus that "she left her waterpot and went away into the city." Having found the spiritual she did not feel her dependence upon the material things of life. So it ever is, the water of life is more satisfying than the water from the earth. The bread of life is more sustaining than the natural bread. The joy of the Lord means more than the jazz of the libertine. Those who become attached to Christ will leave all else to follow him. A converted man or woman forgets many things that were previously considered of first importance. What an opportunity is presented to youth and adults in these pre-Easter days to leave behind, to forget the water-jars of materialism and seek Jesus Christ.

As evidence of her new association with the Master she said to every man she met on her way into the city "Come, see a man—Can this be the Christ?" At the wells of life on the highways of today we will ever find the Christ waiting to give us the water of life. Will we grasp at such an opportunity, forget that for which we came, accept his offer and

FIRE DAMAGED DR. C. T. ZARING HOUSE SUNDAY

FLAMES WERE FIRST NOTICED ABOUT 11:30 O'CLOCK ON SUNDAY NIGHT.

BURNED BETWEEN WALLS

Fire Spread From Between Walls Practically All Over Attic—Two Lines of Hose Were Used.

Considerable damage was done to the Dr. C. T. Zaring property, located on the corner of Poplar and Vine streets, by fire and water, in a conflagration which raged practically the entire attic of the structure late Sunday night.

The local firemen received the call about 11:30 o'clock and about an hour and a half was required before the flames were extinguished. Fire had started on the first floor, between the walls of the kitchen and burned upwards to the attic, then spreading over the attic.

It was thought that the fire started as the result of the gas range in kitchen getting over heated, as a portion of the range was burned through. The fire then started in the wall, directly behind the range and burned through a space, at places as wide as three feet.

The fire had a start of about five hours, as the range had not been used for five hours before the fire was first noticed. Practically the entire attic will have to be replaced as the interior of the roof was badly damaged.

Two lines of hose had to be used and the large quantity of water caused quite a bit of damage to walls, floors and furniture.

Chairman Nye of the committee, who with Senator Norbeck conducted the Chicago hearings, said today the "Mystery Witness" told of receiving a mysterious package. Its contents, according to Nye, were unknown. One version, however, was that it contained bonds for a Washington man but was misaddressed to a man in Illinois.

It was said that the man for whom the strange package was intended was "possibly" a member of the judiciary, but Nye refused to make any direct comment on that phase of the situation.

Konjola Quickly
Ended The Misery
He Had Suffered

Stomach Trouble and Sleepless Nights Weakened His Whole System.

MR. R. H. McDONALD

"A disordered stomach caused me untold misery in the last five years," said Mr. R. H. McDonald, 168 North Miami St., Peru, Ind. "and I was never able to find a medicine to give me lasting relief until I got Konjola."

"My condition had become so bad that I was afraid to eat on account of the suffering I knew would come afterward. Gas would form and press against my heart, causing shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. Improper bowel movement caused poisons to gather in my system and give me still greater suffering. I was almost too nervous to sleep at night and during the day I was too weak to do my work."

"I got Konjola and this medicine ended all my suffering. Now my digestion is good. I rest better at night and I am stronger in every way to carry on my work. I urge everyone in poor health to give this medicine a trial."

Konjola is sold in Greencastle at the Owl drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this section.

Muncie Bearcats
State Champions

NOSE OUT MARTINSVILLE, 13 TO 12 IN GREAT GAME SATURDAY NIGHT.

Saturday night at the Butler field house in Indianapolis, a new state champion was crowned when the fighting Muncie Bearcats nosed out Martinsville, 13 to 12 in the final game of the 1928 Indiana high school basketball tournament. The Artesian City squad was leading at the half by one point, the count being 9-8. Muncie came back in the final period and prevented Martinsville from making a single field goal.

With forty seconds to play, Martinsville was stalling with the score 12 to 11 in their favor. Muncie called time out, their fourth for the game, and Wooden missed his chance from the charity stripe. It being a technical foul, the ball was brought back to center and Seerist, Muncie pivot man, got the ball on the jump. Seeing that his teammates were covered, he took aim and shot from the very center of the floor, the ball passing through the hoop and hardly disturbing the draperies.

This wonderful shot gave Muncie the game, the final gun finding the count, Muncie 13; Martinsville 12.

Muncie fans went wild for it was the first time in Indiana net history that a team from their city has ever won this coveted honor.

Robert McCarnes, of Logansport was awarded the Gimbel medal for displaying the best mental attitude of any player during the tourney.

GOOD SERMONS
BY MINISTERS
OF THIS CITY

go forth to invite others to come and see him?

Christian Church.

Rev. B. H. Bruner spoke Sunday morning at The First Christian church on the subject "A Morning With the Master-Teachers". His sermon was based upon the eighth chapter of John's gospel. "In this chapter," he said, "we are privileged to spend a morning with the Master-Teacher. He was nearing the close of his ministry. His enemies, smarting under the cutting lashes of his condemnation and his exposure of their religious and political trickery, were trying to make out a case against him. It was in answer to their charges and questions that the great teachings of this chapter were given."

Rev. Bruner pointed out the fact that in this chapter we have three of the outstanding characteristics of the religion of Jesus Christ, suggested. First, its message to the sinner; Second, its illuminating power as the light of the world; and Third, its power as a liberating force in human life and society.

"The attitude of Jesus and of his religion toward sinners, is well illustrated in the action of Jesus when the Pharisees brought before him a sinful woman. The Pharisees saw only the woman she was. She was a sinner and therefore she ought to die. Jesus saw the woman she might become. The sinner was a woman therefore she ought to be saved. Too often the Church takes the attitude of the Pharisees toward sinners. In our dealings with the sinners and the criminals we are more interested in laws for their punishment than we are in seeing that those conditions in human society which breed criminals and sinners are faced and corrected."

"Jesus called himself the light of the world and his religion has become the light of the world. Christianity came into a world that was filled with darkness. But when Jesus came to teach and the power of his message began to work in the hearts of men, upon that dark and hard world where

"Weariness and sated lust Made human life a hell" that midnight world with its faint and scattered lamps of truth, the dawn of a new light began to break.

"The people who sat in darkness saw a great light; and to those who sat in the region of the shadow of death light sprang up."

"But it was as a liberator that the Master-Teacher reached the peak of his teaching in the eighth chapter of John. Jesus had said of himself, 'I am the truth.' Now he says, 'Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.' The quest for freedom is as old as the race. Man is a natural born seeker. Freedom is the necessary condition for all growth. That which denies freedom hinders and binds the individual and the race in its progress. The only way of freedom according to Jesus is the way of the truth. What Jesus said about truth was said in the presence of men who were doing everything in their power to suppress the truth. They proposed to outlaw everything that would raise any question about their traditional beliefs. The world authority was uppermost in their conception of religion. Anyone who advances ideas which endangered their authority was a dangerous religious teacher."

"Jesus' method of gaining the truth was that of the seeker. 'Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you.' Here, again, he crossed the path of the Pharisees. Their method of receiving truth was that of getting it from the past. They simply accepted it and asked no questions. They made no attempt to discover any new truth for themselves, or even to test the truth they had received. They were perfectly content in their slavery to dogma and tradition."

"It is strange how many people today are following the Pharisees rather than Jesus in their search for the truth. The whole Fundamentalist and Modernist controversy today is a conflict between the truth-seekers and the truth seekers. The battle is between those who accept everything that has been handed down from the past, and those who seek to verify old truth for themselves and discover new truth. And in this battle the truth seekers have Jesus on their side. Jesus never intended that men should put their brains in cold storage or a safety vault and take their religion in doses put up by theologians of an age that is dead and gone. He intended that men should use the brains which God has given them in a divine quest for that truth in every realm, religion included, which alone can bring freedom. A modern critic of the Church has said, 'Modern civilization is cracking for want of a religious truth which can earn the allegiance of men by its ability, if voluntarily accepted, to liberate and integrate life.' This is exactly what Jesus promised to his disciples and the world through his person and message."

"When Jesus finished his teaching that morning his enemies took up stones to throw at him. They could not answer his arguments, and cowards that they were, they resorted to the coward's method. This is precisely what multitudes have been doing in the face of Jesus' teaching throughout the years."

AT THE VONCASTLE

Two favorites, established by work in an Adolphe Menjou picture are in the cast of "Serenade" the Paramount production directed by H. D'Abadie D'Arrast, which comes to the Voncastle Theatre today.

They are Kathryn Carver, the leading woman, and Lawrence Grant, who has the role of Menjou's old friend and musical mentor. Menjou is cast as a young Viennese composer who finds inspiration for his masterpiece in life.

Miss Carver was Menjou's leading woman in "Service for Ladies" the same picture in which Lawrence Grant was cast as the king of the mythical kingdom, who was a democratic friend of the headwaiter, Menjou.

Grant also appeared in "A Gentleman of Paris" as General Latour, Menjou's father-in-law.

Lina Basquette, who is the dancer of "Serenade" and a point in the domestic triangle that almost blasts the Menjou romance, was a famous stage dancer in New York before she married the late Sam Warner and entered films. This is her first Paramount picture.

Martha Franklin who has the part of Miss Carver's mother, is a veteran of the stage and screen. This is also her first Paramount picture. Miss Franklin was on the New York and London stage 35 years.

During the business session the club voted to have an Art Exhibit in November, showing pictures of Indiana artists. The arrangements for exhibit were left in the hands of the Art committee of the club.

The committee who had charge of the favors for the patients' trays in Putnam Hospital, reported that they had furnished favors for the special days during February and March. A book case is to be presented to the Hospital as a memorial to Jessie Joslin Overstreet, who was president of the club for three years. The Century Club has given a number of books to the hospital and this bookcase will be used to hold these books.

Indiana at present has about half a dozen silver fox farms, Tulpin said, but this number will increase just as it has in other states.

"Fox farming business is rated fifth in value and profits in the United States at present," Tulpin said.

Tulpin said that there were approximately 5,000 fox farms in the country now.

Bible Club Met Friday.

At the meeting of the Woman's Bible Club, Friday, a tribute to the memory of their beloved teacher, Mrs. John was read by Mrs. John Dunbar.

Mrs. Dunbar's tribute follows: "So many beautiful and fitting things have been said of the life and character of Mrs. John by prominent and able persons, we feel that little can be added to their eulogies. Yet as members of the Bible Club, which she organized, we are impelled, through our love for her, to add one humble tribute. To us, I think, it was not her refinement and culture, her sincerity, nor even her faith, that appealed to us most, though she possessed all these qualities, but it was her great helpfulness in emphasizing the spiritual side of life. That this is a pleasure loving, materialistic age is admitted by every one, and deplored by many, but few there be who help us to stem the tide against it. S. Parkes Cadman said recently 'The most tremendous never ending struggle which we wage from youth to age, is the one we wage against our lower self. All our struggles show that life here is a discipline which would have no meaning, did it not fit us for another higher life hereafter.' Like Paul, she ever counseled, 'Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are honest, are lovely and are of good report, think on these things.'

"By us, her memory will ever be cherished, her faithfulness as a spiritual guide will never be forgotten."
